

Literacy in a new era of Education

Jane van der Zeyden

Ministry of Education, Accredited Facilitator through her company TOOLS 4 TEACHERS

Jane has worked in literacy and ESOL professional development for teachers since 2007. During that time, she has worked on projects such as: Ministry of Education ALL project, Online professional development modules on the English Language Learning Progressions (ELLP), Ministry of Education support material for Using the ELLP matrices, and Professional learning modules to support National Standards. She has also been, or is currently, a member of advisory groups including the Ready to Read Advisory group, National Advisory Group on Graduate Diploma of TESSOL, National Advisory Group on English Language Learners and the Ministry of Education ELLP steering group. In 2016, she published her first book The Essential Oral Language Toolkit.

Jane will share her expertise about how we should be adapting our teaching to include new foci. Over the last few years some of the pedagogical changes that have been promoted are;

- developing student agency,
- cultural responsiveness,
- innovative learning environments,
- utilising a play based approach to teaching,
- building digital capability with our students.
- including phonics programmes and phonic based reading material.

All these approaches and pedagogies have validity in some contexts, but what really is important with literacy teaching in 2019 and what is it our students need?

This workshop will focus on the changes that we may need to make with literacy teaching to address some of the literacy achievement issues seen in our current education system and to include 'new' ways of teaching. This will include some time to consider:

- What are we seeing in New Zealand schools and what does it mean for literacy teaching?
- Where does oral language fit and what do we know about levels of oral language proficiency in NZ?
- How do we blend the digital world with the literacy world?
- How do we adapt our teaching to cater for the increasing language diversity in our classrooms?
- What can we take from the past to use in the future?
